Uninstalling an app on a Pixel 4 XL (Image credit: Joe Maring / Android Central) As the owner of a smartphone, whether it's the best Android phone ever or something more affordable, there are a few basics tasks you should know how to do – such as making phone calls, sending texts, checking your email, etc. The longer you have your phone, the more likely it is that it'll fill up with a variety of apps. There's that game your kid told you to download, the app for the airline you flew once over a year ago, countless social networks you don't really use. You get the idea. Apps are great, but it is possible to have too many of them. Whether your phone is starting to run out of storage or you just don't like how cluttered things are looking, here are two easy ways to uninstall/delete those pesky applications.

How to delete apps from the app drawerThe easiest way to uninstall apps from your phone is by heading into the app drawer. The whole process takes just a few seconds, and for getting rid of apps, you know you don't want/need, it's the way to go. Swipe up on your home screen to access your app drawer. Press and hold on the app you want to uninstall. After the pop-up appears, move the app around. Source: Android Central This takes you back to your home screen. While still holding on to the app, drag it to the Uninstall option at the top. Let go of the app. Tap OK to uninstall it. Source: Android Central

How to delete apps from the settingsAlternatively, it's also possible to delete apps from your phone's settings. It's not quite as simple as the above method, but it does give you more information about how much space specific apps are taking up. If you're running out of storage and looking for the biggest offenders, this is a great way to go about cleaning up your phone. Go to the Settings on your phone. Tap Apps & notifications. Tap See all apps below your recently opened apps. Tap on the app you want to delete. Source: Android Central Tap Uninstall. Tap OK. Source: Android Central Just like that, you now have two handy methods at your disposal for deleting apps on your phone. The first one using the app drawer is the simplest way to go about things. Still, the process involving the settings provides additional information that could be quite useful if you're trying to figure out how to free up storage space on Android. (Image credit: Laptop Mag) Knowing how to delete or disable apps on Android is incredibly helpful whether you want to declutter your phone or help improve performance. With millions of apps available on Google Play, it is easy to end up with a few too many on your phone. Those apps are all taking up space and can ultimately start slowing your phone down even if you never use them. There are a number of different ways to delete or disable apps on Android, here's a quick look at the best methods including how to get rid of some apps that may have come pre-installed on your phone or tablet. There are two methods for deleting apps on Android, both are quick and easy. However, there are slight variations depending on your phone brand and we'll cover that as well. So whether you have a phone from Samsung, Google, OnePlus or any other manufacturer, one of these options will work for you. (Image credit: Laptop Mag)

How to delete apps on Android - Settings methodOpen Settings Tap on Apps & Notifications or Apps (Pixel and OnePlus) Select See all apps or App info Tap on the app that you would like to delete Select Uninstall and tap Ok when prompted That's it. The app and its data will be removed from your phone. If an app shows an option for Disable that means it is a pre-installed app that cannot be deleted entirely from your system. However, there are still advantages to disabling an app as it will no longer show in your App Drawer and it won't run in the background. So if it is an app you have not and will not use you should disable it using the same steps above. (Image credit: Laptop Mag)

How to delete apps on Android - Home screen/App Drawer methodLong press on the app that you want to delete (Samsung and OnePlus) Tap Uninstall or Disable Drag the app to the upper-right corner of your screen and release it over Uninstall Tap Ok when prompted That's it, the app and its data have been deleted from your phone. Today's best Google Pixel 6, Samsung Galaxy S22 and OnePlus 10 Pro deals If you're here, you've probably realized that you can't uninstall an app or two that you want to get rid of. There are plenty of reasons to uninstall unused apps – especially since they take up space and system resources that you might need. In this article, we'll show you how to uninstall apps on Android that won't uninstall. Why Can't You Uninstall Some Apps? The three main reasons you can't uninstall a particular app are: It's a system app. These are necessary for your phone to function. They generally play critical roles, and you want to keep these around. It's a pre-installed app. Pre-installed apps are installed on your device before you buy it. Even if you factory reset your phone, these apps will remain. A classic example of a pre-installed app that many users try to remove is Samsung Pay. It's protected by administrator privileges. Some apps require admin privileges to function, which can protect them from being uninstalled. How To Disable Apps Some pre-installed apps just won't budge. Instead of going through a lengthy process to uninstall them manually, you can simply disable them. Disabling an app prevents it from using system resources, but it remains installed and still takes up space on your hard drive. To disable an app: Go to Settings. Tap on Apps. Find the app you wish to disable and tap it. If Uninstall is grayed out or not present, select Disable. Some apps won't allow you to even disable them. If this is the case, try the next methods to uninstall them. How To Uninstall Apps With Administrator Privilege Some apps are granted Android administrator access. These will prevent you from uninstalling them unless you revoke their administrator privilege. Sometimes, malware can also use administrator privilege to wreak havoc on your phone. If you're concerned you have malware, check out our guide for removing it. To do so: Open Settings. Tap on Biometrics and Security. Select Other security settings. Find the app you want to uninstall and tap the slider to revoke administrator privileges. On some models, you may have to tap the app and select Deactivate. Head back to Settings > Apps. Find the app you want to uninstall and tap it. Select Uninstall. How To Remove Apps with Android Debug Bridge (ADB) This is the lengthiest option but is guaranteed to uninstall any app from your Android phone. We recommend you use caution if you try this approach because uninstalling the wrong apps can break several of your phone's functions. Note: You can use ADB to install apps as well. First, you need to enable USB debugging on your phone. To do this: Open Settings > About phone. Scroll down and tap on Software information. Tap on Build number 7 times and input your security pin when prompted. You will see the message "You are now in Developer Mode". Go back to Settings and tap on Developer options. Find USB debugging and tap the toggle to enable it. Connect your phone to your PC and ensure that USB file transfer is turned on. You may receive a message that says, "Allow USB debugging?". If so, select Allow. Next, you will need to retrieve Android's SDK Platform Tools. Head to the official Android ADB software download page and download the package for your operating system. Android provides software for Windows, Mac OS, and Linux. Extract the files from the downloaded archive. To uninstall apps using this software, you need to know the app's package name. It isn't easy to find the package name, but luckily the App Inspector can reveal it for you. To install it and find the app's package name, do the following: Open the Google Play Store. Search for App Inspector. Install and open the app. Find the app you want to uninstall and tap on it. Note the package name. Next, use the Command Window (or Terminal on Mac) to access your phone via ADB. To do this: If you're using Windows, open the folder containing your ADB files, hold down the shift key, and right-click anywhere on the screen. Select Open a command window here. On Mac, open the Terminal app, type cd, press the Spacebar, then drag the ADB folder into the Terminal window. Finally, press Enter. In either window, type ./adb uninstall, press Spacebar, enter the package name, then press Enter. For example, if you want to uninstall App Inspector, you would type: ./adb uninstall bg.projectoria.appinspector If successful, the window should display a message saying "Success". And that's it – your app will now be uninstalled. Stubborn Apps Begone! Hopefully, one of these methods helped you remove that stubborn app. Using the ADB tool takes the longest to set up, but it's easy to clear all those unused apps quickly once you do.
